

CHILEAN WINE CAPTURES GLOBAL ATTENTION

DECANTER

“Chile is making a shift up from the lower echelons of the pricing spectrum into more premium territory...now it’s clear producers are focusing on imbuing the wines with elegance, restraint and great capacity to age. This is very promising news.”

Peter Richards MW, ‘World Wine Awards 2017’, July 2017

JAMES SUCKLING

“The quality-price ratio is hard to ignore: highly rated Chilean bottles that cost $15 to $30 a bottle in the United States can easily compete with European or Californian counterparts that would cost three to four times as much.”

James Suckling, ‘The Time for Chilean Wine is Now’, May 2017

WINE & SPIRITS

“[These wines] offer a completely different face of Chile, a style of wines that give the country a way into the conversation... and joins the eternal search for wines of authenticity.”

Patricio Tapia, ‘Shaby Chic, Chile’s Vino Pipeño’, February 2017

WINE ENTHUSIAST

“During the 17 years I have covered Chilean wine for Wine Enthusiast, never have more boutique wines made their debut than right now. Now more than ever, the little guy in Chile is making waves.”

Michael Schachner, ‘Chile’s Small Wineries Are Crushing It’, October 2016

ROBERT M PARKER JR.’S THE WINE ADVOCATE

“This is not the industrial and boring Chile you might have had in mind. THINK OUTSIDE THE BOX.”

Luis Gutierrez, ‘Chile: Think Outside The Box’, January 2016

VINOUS

“It’s a little depressing that sommeliers who seek out wines from the most obscure regions of France, Italy, Spain and California apparently can’t seem to find even a single Chilean bottling that meets their standards. Are [sommeliers] even bothering to look at this vinously diverse country’s wines at all? I wonder because today there are many excellent wines available from Chile, as well as countless outstanding values.”

Josh Reynolds, ‘Chile’s New Releases: Growing Diversity and Raising Quality’, July 2015
